Current Bug: Burning Infusion does not trigger an AOE lightning bolt. Also, if you right-click with a charge of burning infusion, you may see the message: The number of burning infusion charges on Diablo III has been decreased by an infinite amount. You can't remove burning infusion charges. After a patch, play to level 5, then go to the camp to level up (or go to Hell). When you go to the camp, you will be in the area called "Northern Barrens" and your character will be level 7. The character is non-combat level 7, so it won't have an aura or be able to see the Desecrated Temple aura. NOTE: You must travel to the camp by Normal difficulty. * If you are level 62 or higher, you will be able to enter the area. * If you are level 61 or lower, you will be unable to enter the area. Q: If you kill a character when you are level 25 and it drops something, how long do you have to wait until you can pick it up? A: If you kill a character while they are at level 25, they will not drop anything that you can pick up, and you will not be able to pick anything up until you reach level 26. How do you get the gears? You get the gears when you reach level 5 and play for a day. (or for 12 hours) When I change my level, how do I start over from level 1? You must change your level by going to the camp and changing your difficulty. Will the Jewel of Regret actually drop? If you get it from the chest when you change levels, it will drop. Is there a bonus for doing the Above and Beyond Quest? The Above and Beyond quest will have no effect on game performance. There are two versions of the Necromancer with the Reaper of Souls expansion. There is the Necromancer class that has various abilities on different tiers of necromancy, as well as a Necromancer subclass that changes the base necromancy abilities, but does not give you unique abilities. I'm level 60 and my Necromancer has the Gloomstalker 82157476af
